

Dear Committee Members,

Travelling with food allergies is a scary and daunting experience if the appropriate accommodations are NOT in place.

I recently travelled on a US airline that allowed me to board early to wipe down my children seats as both have a serious nut allergy. They also made an announcement to inform all passengers that children with a serious allergy are on board and to please refrain from eating nuts if possible.

Simple measures made our journey a lot more enjoyable.

Cross Contamination is a fear we have to be aware of every passing moment when traveling with our children.

Having travel companies and employees understand our dilemma makes for a enjoyable and more frequent traveling.

Thank you

Antony Clark
