General Comment

Please amend the regulations to clarify which jurisdiction's regime takes priority for international flights. Two years ago, I flew from Canada to Istanbul with a significant cancellation and delay in two different jurisdictions. I still have an open complaint against the airlines because they choose the penalty regime that is more favourable to them, where my stance that the Canadian regulations should apply because I bought my ticket in Canada, I started my journey in Canada and my return was destined to Canada. Canadian laws matters and international carriers should not have the option to select a lesser standard.
