

Submitted to the Canadian Transportation Agency (Form submission)

Subject: Consultation on proposed changes to strengthen the Air Passenger Protection Regulations

Name: Robert Penner

Date: 2023-07-12

Personally I don't want any process to recoup or recompense me for missed flight's regardless of the reason. Allow the industry to be free of these constraints and user beware that things can happen. They overbook because they need to fill the plane to cover their costs should something go wrong and they are forced to give passenger compensation for just about anything. Remove all the regulation about compensation and the price of flight will fall to a cost which people could accept as reasonable and afford to travel earlier or not at all. Government regulations on airlines need to go except for safety and standards. What other transportation system in Canada has similar rules, definitely not the bus, train, ferry, taxi systems, if they dont go it is up to you to work around it. What makes airlines special?