

Submitted to the Canadian Transportation Agency (Form submission)

Subject: Consultation on proposed changes to strengthen the Air Passenger Protection Regulations

Name: Joe Taylor

Date: 2023-07-13

Airlines should not be responsible for everything that goes wrong in getting people to their destination. as you know there are several company's that are also involved in getting aircraft in and out on time. If they are the cause then why would an airline be responsible:

Air Traffic controllers, weather delay, connecting guests from another airline, staffing issues with 3rd party services. The list goes on, so it is not right to blame the airline itself and expect them to pay for everything.