Had flight cancelation due to "crewing issues" no compensation provided as airline described delay as outside of their control. Since the airline manages their flight crew and the time that they are working and resting this would be under their own control as a cause of the delay.

Have flight cancelation due to crewing issues and other concerns due to the airline employees having the flight canceled due to sickness and exceeding hours of rest is under the airlines direct control and should be compensated to the passengers of the flight if there are any delays.
