I would also like it to include refunds for people who were required by their employers not to travel when Covid-19 was beginning to spread and on the cusp of the Government of Canada recommending that Canadians don't travel. We canceled our flight to Hawaii last March just days before the airline did, and only received travel credit from Air Canada. It's now almost a year later and restrictions have not lifted. I doubt we will feel safe enough to travel internationally for some time. I also now have two knee replacements that will be taking place during the coming year and won't be able to travel even if restrictions are lifted. It seems terribly unfair that Air Canada can just keep our money.
