Subject: air passenger protections

I read an article about the CTA seeking input about airlines' requests to weaken regulations. It ends with a comment from the author "that its solicitation for input was not being made in good faith". Well, that may appear to be so as it took quite of a bit of searching to find the information on the internet. Once found, one must submit a written response with facts, etc. Most of members of the public will not respond given these restrictions even if they are aware of this issue. However, I am being hopeful that my small bit of input, from a member of the public who flies regularly (except for the last COVOD months), will be considered.

My input to the implementation of the airlines' requests is NO changes to passenger rights. Merci.
