

There should be appropriate accommodations made on all modes of transportation for people with food allergies, including consistent staff training and education, and having protocols in place to manage food allergies.

People with allergies should be identified and asked if they have their medication with them. I think it is appropriate to ask to see their EpiPen. If they are not carrying one, then special accommodations could be refused. If the person with allergies is prepared with appropriate medications, etc., then appropriate accommodation should be met.

Thank you.

Sonia Simoneau
Ottawa, ON