

We are a family with life threatening food allergies.

Though we enjoy travelling, we have been limited by the fear that our youngest child may have a life threatening reaction at 30,000 feet with no access to medical attention or no vigilance and training offered to staff to accommodate.

There should be appropriate accommodations made on all modes of transportation for people with food allergies, including consistent staff training and education, and having protocols in place to manage food allergies.

Concerned Canadian Family of 11 year old who has already experience one life threatening allergy.

Thank you,

Veronica Bric